From the Desk of Father Frank

Dear parishioners,

This is the week of Thanksgiving. For me, it is hard to keep track of all for which I need to thank God and you for. I am thankful for my priesthood and all that it entails, even the crazy things that could drive me crazy if God weren't helping me. That is why I appreciate the things that make my life a challenge, remindimg me that I need God's help.

But when God, through the archbishop, sent me out here for this assignment, he knew who would be out here to help me. Here are the ones on the top of my list. Sarah Hemenway has been great at keeping track of all the accounts that the parishes have. In case you are wondering, that is over fifty accounts. This involves making sure the money you contribute is being accounted for in all the ways that are needed. Ann Kurpgeweit has been critical to keep me and the rest of the staff on track with all the things that have been going on these last years with Fr. John. Under his leadership a lot of things were decided, and the history of that is important or we would be reinventing the wheel. Like every pastor, Fr. John had a unique way of working things out and Ann was involved with many of those decisions. Mary Hecht has been great with the bulletin and communications. This is helpful as we are trying to keep people informed on all the things that are going on every week. Poor communication leads to conflict. Plus, making the bulletin attractive so more people look through it is a special talent. Chantelle Dempster keeps the programs working that keep the mustard seed growing. She is coordinating the things that help our faith life. This is also exciting since the parishes each had their own programs, but it has been necessary for us to consolidate things. It is not like consolidating the bank accounts, but it is still watching out for our investments in our treasure from heaven. Deacon Starman has been coordinating the many cemeteries we have in our eight parishes and keeping track of all the short- and long-term maintenance projects that we need to do. Dorothy Brandt keeps track of things in the biggest parish in our group and takes care of the Mass intentions. Having her in the rectory in Neligh has helped with much of the transition, since she has been working in the area for the longest. She was there before I was there the last time. Kari Schindler has been working with Pope John and our family of parishes and coordinating with me to help you know about opportunities for gathering God's gifts to all of us and showing where they can be of assistance for our system of parishes. This development work saves me a lot of time. Then we have Hank Thieman, which the bulletin describes as an all-around good guy. He coordinates the maintenance work for SJP, which includes the parish offices. Steph Stuhr has been great at keeping track of the whole staff and manages the day-to-day business of the team. She is the one that compiled much of the financial information that I passed on to you. These people are not all full time for our parishes, but they all have been working hard, especially with all the transition that has happened this past year.

That is just a start. We also have all of you who are volunteers. We need to remember all the time and talent our musicians have put in every month. As we go through the holidays, we also need to be grateful for all the people who keep the churches clean, looking good, and decorated for the season of the church calendar. Then there are all of you who put in volunteer hours for the fundraisers. So many people in our parish organizations, like altar societies, Knights of Columbus offer opportunities for men and women to act out their faith. What I love to watch is the young people who volunteer to help with these fundraisers. This is the lived experience of their faith. They may not even realize it, but it strengthens them for their spiritual journey through life; it gives them grace.

As we get older and more tired, these young people will be the next workers and parish coordinators. That means their work will help them get to heaven but will also help others to start experiencing a life of service for the kingdom. This is what we are here to do. Know, love, and serve God in this world, and then be happy with him in the next. Jesus gave us the model when he said, he did not come to be served but to serve. Encouraging these young people is a ministry in itself. That encouragement involves inviting the next generation to help, being patient with them, letting them try new things, and thanking them, like I am doing here.

God bless you,
Fr. Frank Baumert
